

The Frontinus Society

According to the vital importance of the supply of water and energy and their transport via pipeline systems for all cultures, it is important that knowledge about the history of these fields is preserved and promoted. The Frontinus Society supports relevant research, passes on knowledge about the history of water, energy and pipeline technology, and promotes young scholars working in this field of technological history. Additionally, it offers information and knowledge on these subjects to anyone who is interested.